PRESIDENT OFF FOR THE SOUTH

FIRST STOP IS MADE AT CANTON, OHIO, TODAY.

MAKES SEVERAL ADDRESSES

DUE TO RETURN TO WASHINGTON OCTOBER 23.

CITIES ARE IN GALA ATTIRE

Many Towns Are to Be Honored by Presence of Roosevelt—McKinley Monument Dedicated at Canton—Carnival on at St. Louis.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29. — With a hearty good-by and "good luck" President Roosevelt left here tonight at 7:41 in a special train over the Pennsylvania railroad on his western and southern trip. Accompanying him were Secretary Loeb, who goes as far as Keokuk, Iowa; Assistant Secretary Latta, T. H. Netherland, Surgeon General Rixey, U. S. N., Secretaries Wilson and Garfield, who go as far as Canton, O., representatives of the three press associations, and a photographer. Dr. Alexander Lambert, the president's family physician, John M. Parker and John A. McIlhenny, civil service commissioner, whose guest the president will be on the hunting trips in Louisiana, will join the party in the south.

The president arrived at the station 10 minutes before starting time and after shaking hands with a number of friends who had come to see him off, entered his car. The first stop will be Canton, O., tomorrow morning where the president is to deliver an address at the dedication of the McKinley memorial. From Canton, they party will leave in the afternoon for Keokuk, Ia., which will be the starting point of the president's trip down the Mississippi as the guest of the inland waterways commission.

Will Deliver Several Speeches.

After leaving Canton, the president will deliver several speeches, the first of these being at Keokuk on Tuesday. Wednesday he will speak at St. Louis, Thursday at Cairo and Friday at Memphis, from which point the start for the canebrakes of Louisiana will be made. On the return trip to Washington, where he is due October 23, he will deliver addresses at Vicksburg and Nashville.

CANTON, O., Sept. 29.— Canton expects 75,000 visitors tomorrow when the president of the United States and many other distinguished persons will be present to participate in and witness the dedication exercises at the McKinley monument. Ample preparations have been made to feed the multitude and every opportunity in accordance with the ceremony will be given visitors to see the parade.

Many Special Trains.

The railroads operating lines in this city announce that more than fifty special trains will be run, carrying United States infantry and cavalry, Ohio National guardsmen, civic organizations and citizens who come in groups and singly from all parts of the nation.

Word has been received that all the trustees of the McKinley national memorial association will be present. The vice president, members of the president's cabinet, United States senators, congressmen, governors of states, representatives of foreign governments and other notables will also be here.

To accommodate the throng of strangers, numerous reviewing stands have been erected and abundant space free to all will be afforded along the line of march. The city is elaborately decorated. There will be a cordon of military drawn with tight lines along the line of march around the reviewing stand, occupied by the president and around the mausoleum on Monument hill. The line of march has been roped off for several miles.

St. Louis in Gala Attire.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 29.—St. Louis is festooned and decorated and all is in readiness for the beginning tomorrow of the program for carnival week, the principal event of which will be the short visit on Wednesday of the president of the United States, who will step here for five hours on his voyage down the Mississippi river from Keokuk, Iowa., to Memphis, Tenn.

The city will also have as honored guests the governors of 23 states, the members of the inland waterways commission and congressmen from almost every state in the Louisiana Purchase, and other dignitaries.

The illumination of the principal downtown streets will begin Monday night. On Tuesday the visiting governors will arrive. Thirteen of the governors will assemble at Keokuk, Iowa, where the president will speak Tuesday morning. They will be brought to St. Louis on a special train, arriving about 5 p. m. Tuesday evening they will view the Veiled Prophet's pageant from the balcony of the Planters hotel overlooking Fourth street. After the parade, the governors will attend the ball at the Merchants exchange.

River Celebration.

Wednesday morning the river celebration will begin with the arrival of President Roosevelt from Keokuk on the steamer Mississippi. The president is due to reach the main harbor at the Eads bridge at 10 a. m. The entire decorated fleet of 35 steamboats and 100 or more power boats will escort him down the river to the landing and [illegible] engage in a parade along the [illegible] front for an hour.

Immediately after the landing at the Mississippi a long line of carriages will convey the president, members of the commission and visiting governors to the Jal Alai building, where the president is scheduled to deliver an address at 11 a. m. From the Jal Alai building the party of distinguished guests will be taken to the Jefferson hotel, where a luncheon will be served to 400 persons. At 3 o'clock the president will review the Missouri naval reserves. The tributary fleet will escort the president's steamer as far as Jefferson barracks, where a parting salute will be fired. Several of the steamers carrying delegations to the Lakes-to-the-Gulf deep waterway convention will continue in line behind the Mississippi.

DRAWINGS BEGIN OCTOBER 7.

PIERRE, S. D., Sept. 29.—Drawings will begin here October 7 for the lower Brule reservation in Stanley and Lyman counties, continuing until the 12. The government has fixed the minimum price per acre at $1.25 and the maximum $2.50. It is all good crop country, rolling and cut through the center by Cedar creek and lies a few miles southeast of this city.

ASSASSINATION FARCE

BEAULIEU ARRANGED SHOOTING TO ATTRACT SYMPATHY

Woman Exposes Trick of Member of Chamber of Deputies in France.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—Charging that the alleged attempt to assassinate Pierre Leroy Beaulieu last spring was a comedy arranged by Beaulieu himself in order to attract the sympathy of voters, Wandel De Roche has written to Henri Brisson, president of the chamber of deputies, asserting that M. Beaulieu confided to her the arrangement to have himself shot. She says later she was compelled at the point of a revolver to sign a paper denying her relations with Beaulieu and avowing she had been the instrument of his political enemies, notably Premier Cleamenceau.

A dispatch from Montpelier, Feb. 28, said that an unsuccessful attempt was made that day to assassinate M. Beaulieu, who was a candidate for election to the chamber of deputies. Six shots, it was stated, were fired at him from ambush while he was driving in a carriage, one of them breaking his left arm. His assailant escaped.

Beaulieu, who was the director of the Institute of France, was re-elected to the chamber of deputies on March 5. Violent disturbances followed the announcement of his re-election.

CHILD MURDERER CAPTURED

RHYOLITE, Nev., Sept. 29.—Deputy Sheriff John Casey arrived here last night with Charles Clay, who murdered little Charlie, a Piute Indian and son of Chief Tecopah, at the Pah Camp ranch a week ago. Clay was captured by the deputy and four Indians in the Charleton range of mountains 80 miles south of Rhyolite, where he had secreted himself in a deep canon. He agreed to give himself into the hands of the law if protection against the avenging Piutes was guaranteed.

TRADERS ARE HOPEFUL

FEELING OF ENCOURAGEMENT STILL PREVAILS.

Approach of October Quarterly Settlement, However, Is Cause of Some Apprehension—Review.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29. — The general attitude towards the stock market last week was one of aloofness and neglect, prompted apparently by a desire to await a clearing of the situation and by uncertainties suggested by some of the developments of the week. The neglected condition of the market resulted in a decline of prices which was supposed to be due to operations of a professional origin.

The feeling of encouragement which had grown up previously was not relinquished, but the conviction was general that the maintenance of the improved situation in the money market would be dependent on the conservation of resources for the needs to be met and upon refraining from a diversion of the resources into speculative channels. The approach of the October quarterly settlement period promised some large special requirements both here and abroad, which served as a warning for special conservatism throughout that transition period.

There was much discussion on the tone of the president's coming address, as it is believed it will deal with the policy of the government towards corporations. The receivership for the New York city surface lines, although clearly foreseen, had a disturbing effect, owing to the complexity of the financial tangle involved. The poor reception accorded the announcement of the new stock issue by the New York, New Haven and Hartford, with subscription privileges to stockholders at 125, was a decided factor in chilling returning confidence in the improvement of the investment situation. The action of the New York city 4½ bonds gave some indication of a speculative origin for the previous rapid advance in those securities and went into the same category of influences as the New Haven stock issue.

The measures of relief by the treasury department have not approached the resources in hand for that purpose, the amount of deposits with national banks reflected by the treasury statement being apparently about $12,000,000, compared with estimates of a possible $40,000,000 or even $50,000,000. The banking position of the whole coun-

BORAH IGNORANT OF CONSPIRACY?

SENTOR'S CONNECTION IS YET TO BE PROVEN.

IS CONFIDENT OF EXONERATION

TASK CONFRONTS GOVERNMENT ATTORNEYS.

W. F. M. UNDER SUSPICION

Rumor That Western Federation of Miners Effected the Indictment of Senator Borah, Being Investigated — Second Week of Trail Begins Today.

BOISE, Idaho, Sept. 29.—The second week of the trial of United States Senator Borah, charged with complicity in the Idaho land frauds, begins tomorrow morning before Federal Judge Whitson with the government attorneys still confronted by the task of connecting the defendant on trial in some criminal way with the alleged unlawful combination.

During the first six days of the trial, the name of Senator Borah was seldom heard and the evidence adduced in behalf of the United States had to do mainly with the activities of former Governor Steunenberg. It has been clearly shown that a partnership existed between Steunenberg and a capitalist named Wilson Sweet, to acquire, hold and generally deal in timber lands.

Trend of Testimony.

It has been shown, according to the confessions of the "dummy" entrymen themselves, that John I. Wells and John Kincaid furnished persons with money to prove up their timber claims. Next it has been shown that Governor Steunenberg was introduced to one Albert E. Palmer, and that Palmer introduced the former executive of Idaho to James T. Barber and Sumner G. Moon of the present Barber Lumber company. One group of "dummy" entrymen testified that they deeded their property over to Palmer. The immediate purpose of the prosecution now is to show that Palmer drew the money, some $80,000 in all, from Barber and Moon and turned it over to Frank Steunenberg, agent, who in turn gave it to Wells and Kincaid.

As far as this evidence has gone it has been admitted without any objection on the part of the defense on the promise of the prosecuting attorneys eventually to connect Senator Borah with the conspiracy. Senator Borah's counsel have adopted the general policy of not cross-examining any of the witness who confine their testimony to the alleged conspiracy among Steunenberg, Wells, Kincaid and others.

It seems to be the policy of the defense to admit, for the purpose of Senator Borah's case, that a conspiracy did exist, but to contend that Senator Borah knew nothing of its formation or existence and that he acted in good faith as attorney in handling some of the land matters upon the assurance of his clients that the purchases were the result of bona fide bargains and sales.

Senator Still Confident.

Senator Borah continues to express confidence that he will be completely exonerated. His attitude in the court room almost borders upon indifference to the testimony so far as it has gone. He usually sits by one of the open windows in the court room and seldom consults with his counsel.

W. F. of M. Suspected.

The special grand jury which is investigating charges of misconduct against District Attorney Ruick, has decided to make inquiry into rumors that the Western Federation of Miners has something to do with the indictment of Senator Borah. Frederick Miller of Spokane, Wash., one of the Haywood attorneys, was arrested here today in response to a grand jury subpoena. One witness before the grand jury is said to have stated that he heard Miller say the federation had spent $15,000 in securing Borah's indictment. Miller will be a witness tomorrow.

Peter Neth, one of the jurors impaneled to try United States Senator William E. Borah, was taken violently ill tonight and it is said his indisposition may stop the trial, although this cannot be definitely told until tomorrow. The nature of Neth's illness is being carefully withheld, but one of the government counsel tonight said he believed Neth to be suffering from temporary mental derangement due to the excitement of the trial. Hony rumors were afloat tonight as to Neth's condition, but no authoritative statement was given out. The day following his acceptance as a juror Mr. Neth asked many questions of Judge Whitson as to whether buying improved homestead property constituted a crime. He speaks English rather brokenly, but little attention was paid to him.

THIRD TIME IN PHILIPPINES

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 29.—The Eighteenth United States infantry started at 5 o'clock this afternoon for the Philippines, where they will have station for three years. The regiment is commanded by Col. E. F. Davis, General Hall having been made commandant of the school at Fort Leavenworth. The present trip of the regiment to the Philippines is the third in nine years to the islands. The Thirteenth infantry will arrive from the Philippines shortly to take the place of the Eighteenth at Fort Leavenworth.

AUTUMN MANEUVERS START

Plans for Exercises of English Fleets Completed.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Under the supreme command of Lord Charles Beresford, the combined home Atlantic and channel fleets will leave Portland about October 11 for the autumn maneuvers which this year are being conducted in the North sea and will be somewhat similar to those held in the spring off the coast of Portugal. While the usual fleet maneuvers and exercises will be carried out, the main object is believed to be strategical to reach the officers what the admiralty would expect of them in case of war with Germany. The program is being kept a secret and it is announced that on this occasion journalists will not be allowed to accompany the ships.

Neither have the naval attaches been given any information and will not be present with the exception of the Japanese who, as England's allies, have in recent years been the guests of the officer in command on occasions of the kind.

Lord Charles Beresford will be accompanied by no less than nine admirals and the big ships of his fleet will include 25 battleships, 11 armored cruisers and 10 protected cruisers, with a fleet of smaller vessels including torpedo boat destroyers, numbering 60 or more.

IMMIGRATION ENTENTE

WAR SECRETARIES DISCUSSING DIFFERENCES.

Taft and Terauchi Laying Foundation for International Agreement It Is Believed.

TOKIO, Sept. 29.—Preliminary to three days of social and diplomatic activity, Secretary of War Taft and his party spent a quiet Sunday, resting in the palace of Shiba, an ancient and picturesque residence belonging to the imperial family. During the day numerous Japanese dignitaries and officials called upon the secretary, many of them accompanied by their wives.

Charlie Taft organized a baseball team, composed of Japanese youths, and a game was to have been played today on the famous lawn of the castle, but his father objected and caused a postponement until tomorrow.

Among the more important of the callers today was Lieutenant General Terauchi, the imperial minister of war, who had a lengthy conference with Mr. Taft. Some importance is being attached to the fact that there have been two conferences between the two war ministers, and on account of the mutual admiration and the influence of Lieutenant General Terauchi it is believed in certain quarters that the groundwork is being laid for an entente concerning immigration, which, it is conceded, is the only point on which there is difference of opinion between the two countries.

Another of Mr. Taft's callers today was Lebbeus Wilfley, representing American commercial interests in Shanghai, who is anxious concerning the attitude of the United States in view of the talk of the dismemberment of China, and who came here to request that Mr. Taft make a positive statement concerning this on the occasion of the dinner to be given in his honor by the American association of Shanghai. It is understood that Mr. Wilfley was informed that Secretary Taft would make no statement on the question.

Secretary Taft and his family took a long drive in the imperial carriage this afternoon. The route which the carriage would take had not been announced, but the crowds in the streets recognized the American secretary of war and greeted him with cries of "banzai" and bows and smiles. It was quite evident that the enthusiasm was spontaneous. The Japanese believe Mr. Taft is a peace envoy.

INTEREST RUNS HIGH

AMERICAN LEAGUE RACE IS GROWING WARM.

Detroit and Philadelphia Only Few Points Apart—Chicago Almost Out of Running.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Interest in all other branches of sport this week will be overshadowed by that focused on the thrilling race between the leading teams of the American baseball league for the pennant of 1907 and the honor of meeting the Chicago club of the National league for the world's championship early next month. Detroit begins the week with 87 games won and 58 lost, and Philadelphia with 83 games won and 53 lost—a percentage of .605 for the former and .601 for the latter. Chicago is third in the race with a very remote chance of catching the leaders, having a percentage of .588.

Tomorrow Philadelphia and Detroit will play a double header at Philadelphia, after which Detroit will jump to Washington for four games and thence to St. Louis for three. Only one game has been lost by Detroit in the capital city this season, and Manager Jennings is hopeful that his high percentage of victories there will be maintained. In St. Louis, however, things have not always been rosy for Detroit.

After Detroit leaves the Philadelphians will welcome the Clevelands on their home grounds for four games and then will go to Washington for three.

CORNERSTONE OF CATHEDRAL LAID

ROOSEVELT ATTENDS SERVICE

WISHES GODSPEED IN THE WORK OF EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

DELIVERS WORDS OF GREETING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—Today witnessed two events here of general interest to the religious world at large and specially to the Episcopal church. The first and chief of these events was the laying of the foundation stone of the cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul at Mount St. Alban, Wisconsin avenue; the other was the great open air service on the same grounds under the auspices of the international convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, which brought to a close the convention which has been in session here for the past week. The cornerstone laying was under the guidance of the Episcopal church in America.

With febitring ceremonies and solemnity the foundation stone of what promises to equal in point of architecture and outlay the most magnificent cathedrals in the world, was laid at noon.

It was a notable occasion, made more so by the presence of the president of the United States and the bishop of London.

Distinguished People Present.

Among the distinguished people in the assemblage, besides President Roosevelt and Bishop Ingram, were J. Pierpont Morgan and Chief Justice Fuller of the United States supreme court.

Among the prelates who took part in the exercises were Rt. Rev. A. F. Winnington Ingram, lord bishop of London, who delivered the salutation; Bishop Satterlee of the diocese of Washington, who performed the ceremony of laying the foundation stone, and many other bishops of the church.

President Roosevelt was among the early arrivals and occupied the chair of Bishop Satterlee, who presided. This chair, the property of Bishop Satterlee, was brought to this country from England some four hundred years ago. To the president's right sat Archbishop Luttall of the West Indies, while on his left was Bishop Satterlee.

The ceremony began with the procession of 300 choir boys, followed by the bishops, the clergy, the cathedral chapter, the cathedral council and the marine band, playing Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," which was sung by the choir as the procession marched into the amphitheater and took their appropriate seats. Bishop Satterlee performed the ceremony of laying the foundation stone. The trowel was the one used in laying the foundation of the capitol building and the gavel was used by George Washington. The ceremony of laying the foundation stone completed, Bishop Satterlee introduced President Roosevelt, who said:

Roosevelt Speaks Word of Greeting.

"I have to say but one word of greeting to you today and to wish you godspeed in the work begun this noon. The salutation is to be delivered by our guest, the bishop of London, who has a right to speak to us because he has shown in his life that he treats high officials as high officials should alone be treated, either in church or state, and above all in a democracy such as ours, simply as giving a chance to render service. If office is accepted by any man for its own sake and because of the honor it is felt to confer, he accepts it to his own harm and to the infinite harm of those whom he ought to serve. Its sole value comes in the state, but above all its sole value comes in the church if it is seized by the man who holds it as giving the chance to do yet more useful work for the people whom he serves.

"I greet you here, Bishop Ingram, because you have used your office in the aid of mankind; that while you have served all, you have realized that the greatest need of service was for those to whom least has been given in this world. I believe so implicitly in the good that will be done by and through this cathedral, Bishop Satterlee, because I know that you and those with you, the people of your kindred countries, to one of which I belong, are growing more and more to realize that they must show by their lives how well they appreciate the truth of the text that they shall be judged by their fruits. More and more we have grown to realize that the worth of the professions of the men of any creed must largely be determined by the conduct of the men making these professions; that conduct is the touchstone by which we must test their character and their services.

Times Are Evil.

"The times are evil; that is there is much that is evil in them. It would be to our shame and discredit if we failed to realize that evil, if we wrapped ourselves in the mantle of a foolish optimism and failed to war with heart and strength against the evil. It would be equally to our discredit if we sank back in sullen pessimism and declined to strive for good because we feared the strength of evil. There is much evil, there is much good too, and one of the good things is that more and more we must realize that there is such a thing as a real Christian fellowship among men of different creeds and that the real field for rivalry among and between the creeds comes in the rivalry of the endeavor to see which can render best service to mankind, which can do the work of the Lord best by doing his work for the people best.

"I thank you for giving me the chance to say this word of greeting today."

Following the address of the president, the bishop of London delivered the salutation. Turning toward the president, the bishop thanked him for his presence "amid all his multitudious duties." He also expressed his thanks for the "burning words of encouragement and inspiration of the president," which he said, "would send him back across the seas inspired for his work."

The bishop then referred to the Canterbury ambon or pulpit, which he brought over as a gift to the cathedral. "I come," he said, "as the successor of St. Augustine's champion Miletus, to bring you from the old diocese of London, of which you one day were a part, a real message of love and godspeed."

SERIOUS PRISON RIOT

TWO FORMER ARMY OFFICERS DEAD AS RESULT.

Trouble in Government Prison at Belgrade, Servia, Excites Citizens to Wrath.

BELGRADE, Servia, Sept. 29.—An extraordinary occurrence in the government prison here today resulted in the death of two former army officers and serious street rioting. The two former officers, who were opponents of the so-called regicide regime, were detained in prison on a trivial charge. Being driven to despair by the delay and illegal obstacles put in the way of bringing their cases to a trial, the two prisoners, while exercising in the corridors, wrested guns from the prison guards, and barricading themselves in a room, fired through the windows into the street. The commandant of the prison ordered the guards to seize them, and a desperate fight followed.

Two guards were wounded, and, according to official account, the two former officers committed suicide with their last cartridges. Other accounts, however, say that the two officers were strangled by the guards, who then emptied their revolvers into the lifeless bodies of the men.

Meantime, angry crowds gathered about the prison denouncing the regicide government. Later in the day there was further rioting in which an officer and a gendarme were wounded. Armed patrols are still engaged this evening in clearing the streets of the rioters.

Opponents of the government declare that Novakovics, one of the dead officers, who was the editor of an anti-regicide journal, had been offered his liberty if his paper would cease its attacks on the dynasty, and that both men were victims of police tyranny. The government has ordered a strict inquiry into the affair to determine whether the men committed suicide or were killed by the guards.

PLATT TALKS POLITICS

NEW YORY HAS PLENTY OF PRESIDENTIAL MATERIAL.

Root Must Be Considered, Senator Says, Before States Delegation Can Be Won Over by Ohioan.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Senator Thomas C. Platt, rejuvenated he says, and better fitted for hard work at Washington than for some time before, talked politics today with something of his old-time enthusiasm.

"If my legs were as strong as my mind," he said, "I would get back into the political harness without delay. As it is, I shall stay here until December and then go to Washington to resume my duties in the senate. I like the senate and I am looking forward to a pleasant service the rest of my term in that body."

"Who will be the choice of New York's delegation in the next Republican national convention?" Senator Platt was asked.

"It won't be Roosevelt and it may not be Hughes," he replied. "The president does not want it. The governor is shrewd enough to know that the slightest move on his part to take the delegation would be fatal to his aspirations. He may convince the Republican voters that they cannot do without him."

"President Roosevelt cannot go back on his word. He could not do so even if he were so inclined, and I believe him to be fully in earnest in his declaration.

"The Republican party of New York has other material besides Hughes and Roosevelt. There is Elihu Root, for instance. Before an Ohioan or any outsider gets our delegation Root must be considered. New York cannot be delivered to an outsider as easily as some folks seem to think it can be."

Senator Platt does not believe that Governor Hughes could be persuaded to take second place on the ticket.

"I do not know Hughes very well," he said, "but my judgment is that he could not be forced as Roosevelt was. He is one of the top notchers among the politicians of the day. He is building up a machine along new lines that will be powerful and effective."

RELIGIOUS EDITOR DEAD.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 29.—F. S. Converse, editor of the Christian Observer, reputed to be the oldest religious newspaper in the world, died today of heart attack, aged 71 years. He had just rounded out a half century of service with the Observer.

MEXICANS GREET ROOT CORDIALLY

FREEDOM OF REPUBLIC IS ACCORDED SECRETARY.

GOOD RELATIONS ARE PLEDGED

FRIENDSHIP OF TWO COUNTRIES IS REMARKED.

CEREMONIES INTERESTING

Formal Tendering of Hospitality and Feedom of Mexican Nation to American Simple and Picturesque. Root Met by Reception Committee.

MONTEREY, Mexico, Sept. 29.—At 8 o'clock this morning Secretary Root crossed the Rio Grande river and became the guest of the republic of Mexico. The ceremonies attendant on the formal tendering of the hospitality and freedom of the nation were simple and picturesque.

The train drew into the little station on the Mexican side to the strains of two military bands which played lively American airs. When it came to a halt, Gen. Rincon Callardo approached the secretary and in the name of President Diaz and the people of the republic of Mexico tendered the distinguished visitor the freedom and the hospitality of the country in the following words:

Warmly Welcomed.

"Your Excellency: Especially appointed for this purpose by the president in behalf of the government of the republic, we have the honor to tender to your excellency the most cordial welcome for your happy arrival in Mexico, whose people, of whom we must be considered the faithful echo, pledge continued good relations with the people of the United States. The reception is a homage to your well-known merits, and the people are anxious to receive your excellency as their illustrious guest and highly esteemed friend."

When the general had concluded Secretary Root made a graceful reply, saying:

Secretary Root Responds.

"General Callardo and gentlemen of the committee: I beg you to believe that I am highly appreciative of the cordial and hospitable greeting with which I have been received by you on the threshold of your beautiful and wonderful country. I hope that the visit which now begins will not merely give to me personally the opportunity which I have long desired to see this great country and its marvels, to meet its public men and especially to see its illustrious president; I hope that it will also serve, as it is intended to serve as evidence of the desire of the government and the people of the United States, to strengthen and increase the steadfast friendship which they have long felt for the people and the government of Mexico."

Other speeches were made.

TOSELLI COMING TO AMERICA

Singer Who Married Countess Montignoso to Tour This Country.

FLORENCE, Sept. 29.—Enrico Toselli, who last week married Countess Montignoso in London, in an interview today confirmed the reports that it was his intention to make an American tour as a singer, but declined to give any details concerning it. He protested energetically against the rumor that his wife is in a delicate condition. He declared that she would defend her rights as a mother for the care of her daughter, Princess Anne Monicapia. Lately after a conference between an advocate, acting as intermediary for King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, father of the princess and the countess, Toselli declined to say whether his wife intended to keep the child at all hazards or if the allowance made her by the Saxon court will be cut off if she does not surrender the child.

FLOODS CAUSE DISTRESS.

Intense Suffering Reported in Vicinity of Malaga.

MALAGA, Sept. 29.—The greatest distress everywhere is prevalent as a result of the storms and floods of last week. The governor with difficulty is preventing famished people seizing and eating decayed foodstuffs that have been thrown out by store keepers. Many bodies have been found in the mud. A band of immigrants which was encamped on the quay awaiting a steamer has not been seen since and it is feared all were lost. The damage done is placed at $5,000,000. Fifteen hundred stores were ruined.

ONE KILLED, TWO HURT.

Chief of Fire Bureau of Harrisburg, Pa., Loses Life.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 29. — Chief Cooper, chief of the fire bureau of Harrisburg, Pa., was instantly killed and John Chilly, Harrisburg, and James A. Clark of Pittsburg, a commissioner of Allegheny county, were badly injured at 1:40 o'clock this morning in an automobile accident which occurred on the Grand boulevard near Jones avenue. Chief Cooper and Mr. Chilly were in this city to attend the convention of the Pennsylvania firemen, which convenes tomorrow.

LANDLUBBERS SEE WARSHIPS

Continuous Reception Held on Vessels of Big Cruiser Squadron Anchored Near San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 29.—Thousands thronged the wharves today eager to secure a close view of the big cruiser squadron anchored in the stream of the water front. Every launch and other craft capable of carrying passengers was pressed into service to carry visitors to the warships on each of which a continuous reception was held all day long. The Jackies and marines on board the ships were kept busy explaining the innumerable points of interest to the visitors and everybody from the admirals down to the powder monkeys used every effort to make things pleasant for the landlubbers.

Preparations are already under way on behalf of the citizens of San Francisco to reciprocate for today's hospitality. On Saturday next the California Promotion committee proposes to entertain both the officers and men of the fleet in the harbor. The former will be banqueted and feted by the haut ton of local society at the Fairmount hotel, while the latter will be the city's guests at the chutes.

CAPTURED SANTA ANA'S LEG

The man who captured Santa Ana's cork leg, the most interesting relic of the Mexican war, is still living at San Rafael, Cal. His name is Edwin Elvin Elliott, and he was a member of the Fourth regiment of Illinois infantry.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

FIEND COMMITS AWFUL CRIME

Shoots Young Man, Then Drags His Fiancee Into Thicket, Where He Holds Her Captive an Hour.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29.—A posse tonight is scouring Alexandria county, Va., for a negro who today waylaid and perhaps fatally shot John William Mullen, aged 21, near Rosslyn, opposite this city, and then assaulted Miss Amelia Weiss, aged 17, Mullen's fiancee, with whom he was out walking. Without a word of warning the negro opened fire on Mullen, shooting him through the mouth and splitting his tongue.

The assailant dragged the girl into a thicket, holding her captive for more than an hour. As he held her he said he was going back to her lover "and finish the job." Mullen, however, was able to make his way up the hill and tell of the crime, the girl in the meantime finding her way to her home, where she informed her parents of what had happened. Great excitement prevails and searching parties are looking for the negro.

LONG DISTANCE IN AIR RACE

PARIS, Sept. 29.—A long distance balloon race, for the grand prize of the Aero club of France, was started from the Tuilleries gardens this afternoon under unfavorable weather conditions. A drizzling rain was falling and the wind came out of the southeast, which will take the balloons toward the English coast and destroy the chances of a record unless it shifts. The race lacks the international character of that of last year for the James Gordon Bennett cup, only France, Germany and Belgium being represented, the Italian entrant withdrawing at the last minute. Only veteran aeronauts are participating in the race, among them being Count Saint Victor, Count Doultremont, who was a companion of Count De La Vaulx in his long distance voyages, and Leon Barthou, head of a department of the ministry of public works.

LABORERS LEAVING SPAIN

Spanish Government Alarmed at Increasing Migration.

MADRID, Sept. 29.—The Spanish government, alarmed at the increasing migration of Spanish laborers, has entered upon a vigorous campaign to put a stop to the exodus, and is directing especial efforts to prevent laborers going to Panama for work on the isthmian canal. The government claims to possess proof that the laborers are grossly deceived by the recruiting agents of the canal and that upon their arrival at Panama they are compelled to live and work under the most atrocious conditions. The complaints, however, are plainly traceable to the Spanish landlords, who find their workmen deserting under the prospect of better wages abroad. Within the past two years thousands of Spaniards have gone to the isthmus.

U. S. OFFICIALS BUSY

THEIR MOVEMENTS FIGURE IN WEEK'S EVENTS.

Roosevelt Will Participate in Dedication of McKinley Monument at Canton, O., Monday.

With President Roosevelt on a speech-making trip down the Mississippi river; Secretary of State Root a guest of the Mexican government at many official entertainments, and Secretary Taft the recipient of friendly attentions from the people and officials of Japan, the doings and declarations of the government officials promise to occupy a prominent place in public attention this week.

A notable event in which the president will participate is the dedication on Monday of the beautiful memorial for President McKinley at Canton, O.

Hearings will be resumed in New York on Thursday in the government's action to dissolve the Standard Oil company. James A. Moffett, secretary of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, will appear before the federal grand jury in Chicago on Tuesday to be questioned about the alleged payment of rebates to other companies than his own.

The attorneys general and their assistants from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Tennessee, Mississippi and Texas will meet in St. Louis, Monday and Tuesday, to discuss the regulation of railroads, curbing of unlawful combinations and the conflict of jurisdiction between state and federal courts.

Tuesday, October 1, was the date set by the engineers of American steam coastwise vessels and ocean-going tugs to strike unless an increase of 5 to 10 per cent in wages was granted.

The Massachusetts Republican state convention will be held in Springfield, Saturday, to nominate a state ticket.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 29.—A special passenger train from Cleveland on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, carrying the members of the "Orchid" theatrical company ran into the rear end of a freight train here today and as a result several members of the company were injured but none seriously. Neither Eddy Foy, nor Trixie Friganza were injured in any way and the smash up did not even awaken Mr. Foy.

VIENNA, Sept. 29.—Herr Woelfling, formerly Archduke Leopold Salvatore of Austria, is engaged to marry Maria Ritter, the daugther of a humble Silesian. Herr Woelfling has telegraphed confirmation of this fact from Zurich. He adds in the dispatch that he tried to dissuade his sister, Countess Montignoso, from marrying Enrico Toselli, the singer, on account of the disparity in their ages.

ROME, Sept. 29.—It is announced in vatican circles that a consistory will be held at the end of November or at the beginning of January and that it appears to be certain that an American cardinal will be created.

SEBASTOPOL, Sept. 29.—Three terrorists, disguised as officers, penetrated the barracks here on Saturday in a daring attempt to provoke a mutiny among the troops. The ruse being discovered, they fired upon the officers, mortally wounding Captain Novitoff and severely injuring another officer named Poletkif and escaped in the confusion that followed.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—The storm center in the south of France today shifted eastward to Toulon, the department of Marvar suffering severely. The grape crop has been entirely destroyed. The lowlying districts are submerged. Much damage has been done to the port of Toulon and the arsenal there.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 29.—A special cablegram from London, England, says: Great Britain will send a fleet of five warships to Esquimalt early next spring, following the coming of the United States squadron to the Pacific. Whether they will remain for a year or permanently was not learned.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 29.—The official reception committee having completed the arrangements for the reception of Mr. Root and party in this city, is now considering that portion of their visit which will be spent in the interior. Great animation is reported in the towns along the National railroad line and friendly demonstrations are being prepared in Mr. Root's honor.

ODESSA, Sept. 29.—There are rumors of a serious mutiny in the fleet at Sebastopol. It is reported that many officers have been killed or wounded, but the reports lack confirmation.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 29.—With the final words of the opening hymn which he was singing with his Sunday school class, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again" upon his lips, Frank B. Mitchener, a prominent real estate man of this city, dropped dead at the Second Presbyterian church here today. Mr. Mitchener was 51 years old.

GENERAL BOOTH'S TRIUMPH.

General Booth's Oxford degree is probably his greatest triumph over criticism of the Salvation Army and its methods. Not so many years ago Huxley attacked the general and his ideas with all the acumen he was master of, but the great agnostic's expectations remained to be realized. General Booth, 77, and with his Oxford degree, is still leading his army, with undiminished enthusiasm.

REGULATES STREET CAR RATES

Nebraska State Railway Commission Dictates to Lincoln Traction Company.

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 29.—Announcement was made today by the Lincoln Traction company that it will comply with the order of the state railway commission that it sell six fares for 25 cents to adults and 10 fares to school children to be used during certain hours of the day for 25 cents. The most significant feature in connection with the railway commission's findings is that it places a valuation on the plant of the traction company and the Citizens Railway company and limits their earnings according. This action, it is believed, is an innovation in dealing with public utility companies. Interchangeable transfers were denied by the commission.

try as revealed by the reports to the controller of August 22, shows an improvement over that of May 20; notwithstanding the heavy loan expansion throughout the west and is regarded with assurance. Changes in various items of these reports are interpreted by government officials as indicating a large scaling down of obligations between banks, indicating a reduction of demand obligations which is a further source of satisfaction. The foreign exchanges moved decisively in favor of New York during the week, in response to supplies of exchange furnished by the grain and cotton movement. An increasing inclination to accept American finance bills in London is reported by international bankers. The course of the copper and iron trades continues a central point of interest in the consideration of the financial outlook. Information of the extent of the buying of copper at the lower prices is vague, but trade authorities have grown hopeful that a stable basis for that market is near at hand.

People Who Take Becol Become Strong

It's Probably the Greatest Reconstructive Tonic Ever Devised

In cases where great mental application has apparently worn out every nerve muscle and tissue, a simple prescription of Becol not only acts as an almost immediate corrective, but its continued use seems to supply with perfect rhythm whatever loss occurs to either tissue or nerves (no matter what the cause may be). One ounce Becol, one-half ounce Tincture Cinchona Compound and six and one-half ounces Simple Syrup is the formula. It can be obtained from any druggist at small cost or ingredients may be bought separately and mixed at home in an eight-ounce bottle. Convalescents are benefited by it to a remarkable degree.

What the Press Agents Say

"MY TOTEM POLE" A NEW SONG

All comic opera New York is talking about "My Totem Pole," the big song hit of "The Alaskan," the new comic opera by Joseph Blethen, Max Figman and Harry Girard, which appears at the Opera house Tuesday. Folks who have been to Alaska or even to Seattle, if not to natural history museums, are familiar with totem poles. The Alaskan family tree was considerable of a surprise to New York comic opera patrons, and when in the first act of the opera on the opening night of its run at the Knickerbocker theater, about a score of giant papier mache totems came marching on the stage, a man being concealed within each of their shells of course, the audience fairly rose to its feet in applauding. The Denver Republican in speaking of "The Alaskan," says: "It is a great best playing "Robin Hood." Teddy Webb and Harold Vizard very capably supply the low comedy element. Amy Leicester is clever in a ... role, and the singing of Harry Girard, Agnes Cain Brown, Edward Martindell and Annie Adair is above the comic opera average, while the chorus is a revelation."

"THE PRINCE CHAP" COMING

Cyril Scott in "The Prince Chap," as seen at the Madison Square theater and Weber's Broadway theater, New York, will be presented at the Opera house soon.

"A child's play—artistic studio life—a heart story—a play that fascinates—something new in stage fiction—it's the company—it's the star—it's the play." The critics commented from these various points of view in explaining the success of "The Prince Chap." From the different reports received during the New York run, it is plain that all the above qualities entered into the contest and won equally. The author, Edward Peple; the star, Cyril Scott; and the excellent company—all contributed, with the result, it is said, that "The Prince Chap" is one of the best things hailing from New York in many a day. It contains the atmosphere that made "Trilby" so popular—artistic life of Bohemian London—not of Paris this time—and contains more comedy than in the Du Maurier play. New York saw it 209 times and London 150 times.

credit to the theatrical interests of the west that a western producer and manager has brought to Denver a musical production of such real delight that its theatergoers are gasping for adjectives strong enough to convey their praise of it. "The Alaskan" has "made good"—that is a certainty—and it has the kind of "make good" in it that will doubtless come back to us season after season. Everything about the production is rich, pretty and as refreshing as a May morning. There are no star parts, and in this respect one is constantly reminded of the famous old Bostonians when they were at their

"THE ROYAL CHEF"

"The Royal Chef" is down for a visit to Colorado Springs and will appear at the Opera house on next Monday evening. The music of the play is not only extremely catchy, but has more number for number with any score written for a single production in many a day. The scenic effects are described as great and the company with William J. McCarty in the leading role, unusually capable. The locale of the "Royal Chef" is the mythical "Isle of Oolong," over which the "Rajah" rules in exalted dignity; finding his chef has attempted to poison him, he has the rascal beheaded and orders "Lord Mito," his prime minister, to find him another before sundown or suffer a like fate. The prime minister fears it is a hopeless task, but just as his time is about up he is saved by the unexpected appearance of "Heinrich Lemphauser" of Chicago, who is at once promoted to the position of "Royal Chef." The new chef turns out to be a joke-smith, and around him revolves all the incidents that since never dramatic construction. The opera is staged in fine style both in costumes and every accessory required to give it proper setting, while the specialists, chorus, dancers and supernumeraries meet every requirement, and in point of numbers exceeds any that is usually required in musical comedy.

It is claiming a good deal to say that there have been new ideas evolved in this class of popular entertainment, but the claim is certainly substantiated in "The Royal Chef," which Alan Dale, the well-known New York critic, pronounces as "bright, cheery and enticing."

NEW PLAYS BEING PRESENTED

Milton Royle's New Offering, "The Evangelist" Is Feature "The Struggle Everlasting" Good.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The theatrical forces for this week will present a wide range of new plays both in subject and location. New York will have "The Evangelist" and "The Girl Behind the Counter;" Cincinnati, "Wild Fire," Miss Lillian Russell's new comedy, and Washington, "A Fool and a Girl," with James K. Hackett in the leading part.

The announcement of a new play by Henry Arthur Jones, the English dramatist, may be properly called the feature in prospect for the week. It will be given at the Knickerbocker theater, New York, on Monday evening, under the title of "The Evangelist." The play had its first production last Monday evening at Rochester under the name "The Galilean's Victory," but as this title had given rise to misapprehension as to the period and general character of the piece, a change was deemed expedient.

"I have come back to play Joshua Whitcomb a few times more," said Denman Thompson when he reached New York at the end of the week from his home in New Hampshire. "I am 74 years old and I have played 'Josh' so long I can't remember when I began it, but I am still willing to go on again just to please the children."

Mr. Thompson appears for a brief season in "The Old Homestead" at the Academy of Music on Monday night.

Lew Fields will bring "The Girl Behind the Counter" to Herald Square theater Tuesday evening, while on the same date the Deutsches theater will begin its season of plays in the German under the direction of Herr Baufield.

One of the plays produced last week that has aroused interest and discussion is "The Struggle Everlasting," Edwin Milton Royle's modern morality play. While there is a very wide divergence of opinion as to the merits of the work, it is generally acknowledged that Mr. Royle has written a play that must be classed as the novelty of the season.

PHILADELPHIA'S MUSICAL BEGGAR

From the Philadelphia Record.

There is such a thing as an independent beggar, and one who has a regular route in West Philadelphia gathering in a snug amount of money daily. He is blind and only applies for aid to householders who have pianos. After ringing a door bell the man sings a few lines from "Il Trovatore." This usually brings the occupant of the house out in a hurry. If the singer has only half finished his selection he continues until the end. He has a powerful baritone voice of long range and sings with much expression. Of course, the average woman who opens the door reaches at once for her pocketbook, but the money she offers the singer is at first refused. "I'll not take anything until I've earned it," is his usual answer; "I would like to play a few airs on your piano." This request is usually granted, and the blind musician feels so feelingly that an audience of appreciative neighbors is usually attracted to the house in which he performs. Of course there are many encores, and the listeners, as a rule, show their appreciation by a good offering to the musician.

CREATING LAND BY DRAINAGE.

From the World of Today.

One hundred and fifty million acres is the approximate area of the waste lands in the United States which are possible of reclamation and of being brought into a state of extraordinary productiveness. They afford about equal opportunity for the two classes of improvement, irrigation and drainage.

If anything, drainage should be the more popular and the more beneficent, for the reasons, first, that the swamp areas are generally in the midst of a more or less populous territory, with transportation facilities already developed, and, second, that the engineering problems involved are comparatively simple and the cost of reclamation is much lower than by irrigation.

... reclamation thus far undertaken by the government amounts to about $30 an acre. The cost of drainage reclamation will not exceed according to official estimates for most of the projects, $5 or $6 an acre. Such reclaimed lands will compare favorably with the best cultivated lands in the east, and should eventually reach a value ranging from $50 to $200 an acre, based upon the present value of lands which have already been drained and farmed.

STREET PAVING POSTPONED.

IT IS earnestly to be hoped that the withdrawal of the petitions for street paving in the business district does not mean a permanent abandonment of the plan. The reasons for the action taken are various. Many of the property owners in the district affected are opposed to any kind of paving; others are unable to decide as to what kind is most desirable, while still others are out of the city and could not be reached. It has been thought best to discontinue the effort for the present and await the time when there will be a nearer approach to unanimity in favor of the project.

For the sake of the public welfare this time ought not to be very far in the future. There is actual need for street paving now, and to postpone the work is merely to prolong the dust nuisance and waste a considerable sum of money in the constant re-surfacing of the gravel streets—a work which produces benefits of only a few weeks' duration at best.

The only feature of our climate which is in any degree unpleasant is the high wind which prevails during the spring and early summer. We can not control it, but we can and should control to some extent the dust nuisance which it produces. Street sprinkling affords temporary relief—so temporary, in fact, that it hardly lasts until the sprinkling cars can make another round. But if the entire business district were properly paved the volume of dust would be so reduced that it would no longer be a real nuisance, and there would be a tremendous gain in bodily comfort as well as an appreciable financial saving to merchants whose stocks are now considerably damaged by dust.

The thing needed now is not so much a decision as to the proper kind of paving as it is a determination to pave. We incline to the belief that the bituthic paving is the most desirable, and this is the one favored by the Real Estate Exchange, which has been at considerable pains to investigate the matter. However, this is of secondary importance; the main thing now is for owners of property in the business district to make up their minds that they want the streets paved and are willing to pay the cost. If this decision can be reached in the near future it will be all the better for Colorado Springs.

SECRETARY TAFT IN JAPAN.

AS WAS to be expected, the arrival of Secretary Taft in Japan has been the signal for the renewal of protestations of warm friendship by the representatives of both Powers. The distinguished visitor is to be wined and dined and toasted by various high officials of the Japanese government, including the Emperor, and already the papers are printing editorials welcoming him as the emissary of "America, the friend of Japan." The Secretary is quoted as assuring the reporters of the kindly feeling for the big Oriental Power, held in this country, and to clinch his assertions he tells them that he speaks "as Secretary of War for America and also as Secretary of Peace."

This is all quite fitting and proper and exactly as it should be. When General Kuroki visited our country a few months ago he was received with similar marks of esteem, and it undoubtedly had a beneficial effect in helping to still the small tempest then raging over the San Francisco school question. The welcome was sincere, too, for General Kuroki is one of the real heroes of the Russo-Japanese War, and the American people have felt a genuine admiration for him ever since they knew anything about him. The Japanese have reason to regard Secretary Taft in a similar light, for he comes to them as the representative of President Roosevelt who certainly has exerted himself to the limit of his authority in an effort to conciliate them.

There is just as much real friendship between the governments of the United States and Japan as between our government and any other in the world. There has never been the slightest reason for any other feeling, but this does not alter the fact that there is no great amount of love lost between the two peoples. On the Pacific Coast, where Americans have had the best opportunities to know the Japanese, the aliens are regarded with absolute distrust and dislike, and if they ever become as numerous in other parts of the country this feeling will spread with them. Commercially the two nations are rivals, and the rivalry is sure to become more intense with time. Japan's future depends on her ability to carry on a vast foreign trade, and to do this she must capture markets now held by Americans and Europeans. Toward this end she is bending every energy and is succeeding remarkably. American exporters once had a big trade in Manchuria, but since Japan got control there it has been almost wiped out. There is reason to believe that this bit of history will be repeated in China—not in the political sense that holds true in Manchuria, but in a commercial sense. Cheap labor and close proximity to the markets makes Japan a formidable rival for the commerce of the Far East, and the United States and Europe will have to fight for every dollar's worth of business they get there.

Visits for the purpose of "cementing the bonds," such as Secretary Taft is making now, are of no little value, for they produce a good deal of after-dinner oratory in which speakers have a chance to say pleasant things which tickle national pride. Even if you dislike an individual it is better to be on speaking terms with him and able to treat him decently in company than to be at daggers' points. But no number of such visits will ever remove the social antagonism that exists on the Pacific Coast, though they may prevent it assuming a dangerous phase.

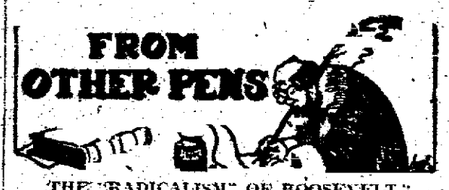

In the twenty-four-hour endurance auto race in New York Saturday twenty-three people were injured, three of them fatally. The winner of an endurance race is the fellow who can stave off getting himself killed until after all the others have perished.

Before placing bets on the outcome of the Fish-Harahan contest it would be well to know whether either of them has ever taken the rest cure under Professor Muldoon.

The report that there are unlimited oil deposits in Nigeria, Africa, is probably incorrect. Nobody has heard anything about Mr. Rockefeller owning Nigeria.

Now that Secretary Taft has arrived on the other side of the world we may expect the usual crop of jokes about the danger of this side tipping up.

Hall Caine says his press agent is a liar. We had understood that the gentleman is a good press agent.

THE "RADICALISM" OF ROOSEVELT.

From the Philadelphia North American.

Only profit can follow the placing of the government stamp of honesty and fair dealing upon the corporations. The people and the administration demand the obliteration only of rottenness. The "radicalism" of Roosevelt in reality is conservatism rightly defined. The very men who denounce his "destructiveness" today will live to confess that it is reconstructiveness.

HUGHES' CANDIDACY.

From the Springfield Republican.

The strong opposition of the New York World to all consideration of a Hughes presidential candidacy is quite as likely as not to make the Hughes' boom travel at an even hotter pace. The World's view is that the Republican party would commit an outrage upon the state of New York to rob it of so good a governor. New York cannot spare him. There is something in that conception of the case, but actually the Republican party will esteem the governor's running qualities the more highly because he inspires such sentiments in a Democratic newspaper.

TRANSVAAL AS A GOLD PRODUCER.

From Mines and Minerals.

The Transvaal was a bankrupt country in 1877, but it is now producing gold at the rate of $120,000,000 per annum. The white population of the Transvaal is about 300,000, about 114,000 of this population are located in the vicinity of the mines. There are 100,000 natives and 53,000 Chinese employed on the mines of the Witwatersrand and there are about 50,000 natives employed in other occupations in and near the mining towns. The 114,000 white people of various occupations on the mining area of the Witwatersrand are supported directly or indirectly entirely by the mining industry, and their numbers have increased proportionally as the mining industry has progressed. When the mines were first discovered only the high grade ore was mined and treated. At the present time the average value of the ore mined and treated is only $8.50 per ton. It requires economical mine management to produce $10,000,000 per month from ore going $8.50 per ton in a country where living expenses are twice as high as they are in the United States and to pay interest on capital invested. The skilled labor is performed by white men and the unskilled labor by negro natives or Chinese under the direction of white men.

CHICAGO AND THE GULF.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

So much interested is President Roosevelt in the general subject of water way development that he is going to attend the Memphis convention of October 4. The gathering, which will be a large one, will voice the sentiment of the entire Mississippi valley. Appropriations are needed for improving the river and making it the important highway that it should become. Plans on a large scale are to be laid out. There is nothing new in the proposition. There is new enthusiasm, that is all. Chicago wants to be connected with the Gulf of Mexico. River towns want to regain the prestige and business they had before the railroads came along to drive the steamboats into practical retirement. Freight can be carried by the river cheaper than by rail. The people desire the benefit of the cheaper rates. But besides that there is the question, which is a growing one, of the handling of freight. The railroads have never done so great a bulk of business. There has been much complaint because of a lack of cars. Relief is needed. The country is becoming so large and its business is increasing so rapidly that the utilization of water ways to a much greater extent is a crying need of the hour. Therefore, the Memphis convention will meet under more encouraging conditions than heretofore.

IS INSANITY INCREASING?

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

The latest figures on insanity in England have given rise to a renewed discussion of the extent to which mental breakdown has actually increased in amount. The figures, of course, on their face show a very great increase. Ten years ago one person in every 314 in England and Wales was reported insane. Today the proportion is one in 282. This tendency to increase has continued for more than half a century and has been much stronger than the increase in population. In 1859 the total number of the insane was 36,762. Today it is 125,588. That is an increase of 237 per cent. Meantime the population has increased only 77 per cent.

The most important type of insanity recorded is senile dementia, which alone accounted last year for 38 per cent of the new cases reported. The theory is advanced by some medical authorities that modern medical science keeps alive the bodies of men after their worn-out minds have given way under the nerve and brain strain of modern labor. The asylums and sanitariums open for these unfortunates, and their lives are prolonged indefinitely. According to this theory there would have been fewer insane under the old conditions, and also those who became insane would have died much more quickly, both factors contributing to the increasing ratio.

Some alienists believe, however, that the increase in insanity is more apparent than real. For one thing the definition of insanity is wider than it used to be, so that people are recorded as insane who formerly would merely have been regarded as "queer" or "cracked." Again with the improvement of the asylums and the more humane treatment of victims, many cases receive official attention which formerly would have been privately cared for by friends and relatives. A more careful selection as between paupers and the insane also increases the inmates of the asylums. The longer life of the insane is also mentioned here, as well as the greater care in the keeping of public records.

Whether the conditions of modern life are making more people insane, or whether the insane are better preserved and more completely enrolled on the records, and how far the two factors are operative, will hardly be satisfactorily determined till much more is known about insanity than even the ablest experts know now. Indeed, the ablest experts are the most cautious when they discuss mental disease, and it is only the ignoramuses and the experts when they are getting fees on the witness stand who have positive opinions. That the problem is one of the most important which society will have to deal with in the coming generation is, however, undoubtedly true.

This Day In History

September 30.

1630—Isaac Johnson, one of the principal founders of the city of Boston, died. He was the first magistrate who died in the colony and was buried on his own lot. The first burying place in Boston was laid out around his grave. The spot is now built upon, being bounded by Tremont, Cornhill, Court and School streets.

1682—Col. Thomas Dongan, preferred by the Duke of York to the government of his province of New York in America.

1770—George Whitefield, one of the founders of the sect of the Methodists, died at Newburyport, Mass., aged 55. He visited America seven times, and preached in all parts of the Atlantic states with great success.

1775—British ship, Rose, Captain Wallace, cannonaded Stonington. The town was considerably injured, two persons killed and a loaded schooner and two sloops carried off.

1779—Col. John White, with six volunteers and his servant, captured a company of 141 British, posted on the Ogechee river, and brought them safe to an American post, 25 miles distant. He also took five vessels, one of twelve and another of ten guns. The exploit was effected by kindling large fires round the post, and making such other parade as demonstrated a large encampment.

1781—Yorktown invested by the American and French armies under Washington and Rochambeau, assisted by the French fleet under Count d'Estaing.

1790—Gen. Harmer, 320 regulars and 1,133 militia, defeated the Indians at Miami village, in Ohio, with a loss of 141 killed and 31 wounded. The loss of the Indians was estimated at about 100 killed and 300 wigwams burned. They also destroyed 20,000 barrels of corn and a great quantity of other provisions.

1797—The state road having been completed, the first stage started from Fort Schuyler (Utica) and arrived at Geneva in the afternoon of the third day, with four passengers.

1800—A treaty concluded between the United States and France and the long standing difficulties between the two countries amicably settled.

1864—The Union blockading force captured and destroyed about fifty blockade runners this month.

1899—A land parade in the city of New York in honor of Admiral Dewey.

1904—Sir William Kennedy, chief justice of the High Court of England, in address at St. Louis declared one nation should not recognize divorce granted in another.

1905—Sutherland M. Prevost, third vice president of Pennsylvania Railroad company, died at Philadelphia, 60 years old. . . . White Sox defeated Philadelphia, 4 to 3.

1906—William Trimble, of San Francisco, arrested at Philadelphia charged with using mails to defraud heirs of wealthy Englishmen; "gold mine" bait to secure $35,000.

Today's Horoscope

Monday, September 30, 1907.

"Seek of the earth this day, and you shall find:
To this the planet's mood is well inclined."

The 273rd day of the year. The moon is 28 days old, in apogee and runs high. Saturn is in benefic aspect with it.

A day most promising for all matters connected with the land. It is lucky for transactions even remotely related to the earth, but is at its very best for those who actually touch the soil, particularly farmers and miners.

An excellent day for renting or leasing houses or farms. Deal in real estate this day.

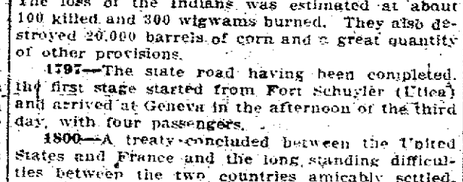

Asks favors. Push all pending matters, but beware of quarrels. There is grave menace in misunderstandings today, pointing even to battle.

An auspicious day for employes, particularly females. Let them be on the alert for opportunity.

Household affairs today will prosper. Bake, try new dishes, hire maids, entertain and start dressmaking. Good luck will attend.

To those whose birthdate this is, the year will bring a law-suit unless they are unusually cautious and equable.

The boy born today will be very quick in temper, and unless he learns to rule it, will be continually in some kind of trouble and have to struggle for a living. The girl born today must beware of a false friend in whom she will be tempted to confide. She will marry fairly well, and her husband will prosper more each year.

AND THE HEAVENS WEPT.

From the Mecker (Colo.) Herald.

A young Mecker gentleman in discussing the weather recently accounted for the continuous showers in a rather unusual manner—claimed that "the heavens were weeping in sympathy with him because his sweetheart is leaving the valley." The Herald reporter overheard the poetic explanation for the damp spell, grasped the idea and immediately stuffed it into the office poetry mill. He then gave the crank just three revolutions and out dropped the following:

'Tis said that the heavens are weeping,
Yes, weeping, dear, day after day;
The sun through the clouds barely peeping
Because you are going away.

If such is the case my dear girl,
We earnestly ask you to stay,
At least 'till the snowy flakes whirl,
For then we'll be through with the hay.

And then if you will you may go,
If you promise to come back again
And with your bright eyes melt the snow,
And so help us along with spring grain.

Seventh Installment

The Mystery

By Steward Edward White and Samuel Hopkins Adams.

They moved away, still talking. I did not dare follow them into the light, for I feared that the doctor would recognize me. I'd have given my eye teeth, though, to have gathered the name of the schooner, or that of her master. As it was, I hung around until the two had emerged from the corner saloon. They paused outside, still talking earnestly. I ventured a hasty interview with the barkeeper.

"Did you notice the two men who were sitting at the middle table?" I asked him.

"Sure!" said he, shoving me my glass of beer.

"Know them?" I inquired.

"Never laid eyes on 'em before. Old chap looked like a sort of corn doctor or corner spell-binder. Other was probably one of these longshore abalone men."

"Thanks," I muttered, and dodged out again, leaving the beer untouched.

I cursed myself for a blunderer. When I got to the street the two men had disappeared. I should have shadowed the captain to his vessel.

The affair interested me greatly. Apparently Dr. Schermerhorn was about to go on a long voyage. I prided myself on being fairly up-to-date in regard to the plans of those who interested the public; and the public at that time was vastly interested in Dr. Schermerhorn. I, in common with the rest of the world, had imagined him anchored safely in Philadelphia, immersed in chemical research. Here he bobbed up at the other end of the continent, making shady bargains with obscure shipping captains, and paying a big premium for absolute secrecy. It looked good.

According, I was out early the next morning. I had not much to go by: schooners are as plenty as tadpoles in San Francisco harbor. However, I was sure I could easily recognize that falsetto voice; and I knew where the supplies were to be purchased. Adams & Marsh are a large firm, and cautious. I knew better than to make direct inquiries, or to appear in the salesroom. But by hanging around the door of the shipping room I soon had track of the large orders to be sent that day. In this manner I had not great difficulty in following a truck to Pier 10, nor to identify a consignment to Captain Ezra Selover as probably that of which I was in search.

The mate was in charge of the stowage, so I could not be quite sure. Here, however, was the schooner—of about a hundred and fifty tons burden. I looked her over.

You're all acquainted with the Laughing Lass and the perfection of her lines. You have not known her under Captain Ezra Selover. She was the cleanest ship I ever saw. Don't know how he accomplished it, with a crew of four and the cook; but he did. The deck looked as though it had been holystoned every morning by a crew of Jackies; the stays were whipped and tarred, the mast new-slushed, and every foot of running gear coiled down shipshape and Bristol fashion. There was a good deal of brass about her; it shone like gold, and I don't believe she owned an inch of paint that wasn't either fresh or new-scrubbed.

I gazed for some time at this marvel. It's unusual enough anywhere, but aboard a California hooker it's little short of miraculous. The crew had all turned up, apparently, and a swarm of stevedores were hustling every sort of provisions, supplies, stock, spars, lines and canvas down into the hold. It was a rush job, and that mate was having his hands full. I didn't wonder at his language nor at his looks, both of which were somewhat mussed up. Then almost at my elbow I heard that shrill falsetto squeal, and turned just in time to see the captain ascend the after gangplank.

He was probably the most dishevelled and untidy man I ever laid my eyes on. His hair and beard were not only long, but tangled and unkempt, and grew so far toward each other as barely to expose a strip of dirty brown skin. His shoulders were bowed and enormous. His arms hung like a gorilla's, palms turned slightly outward. On his head was jammed a linen boating hat that had once been white; gaping away from his hairy chest was a faded dungaree checked cotton shirt that had once been brown and white; his blue trousers were spotted and splashed with dusty stains; he was chewing tobacco. A figure more in contrast to the exquisitely neat vessel it would be hard to imagine.

The captain mounted the gangplank with a steadiness that disproved my first suspicion of his having been on a drunk. He glanced aloft, cast a speculative eye on the stevedores trooping across the waist of the ship, and ascended to the quarter-deck, where the mate stood leaning over the rail and uttering directed curses from between sweat-headed lips. There the big man roamed aimlessly on what seemed to be a tour of casual inspection. Once he stopped to breathe on the brass binnacle and to rub it bright with the dirtiest red bandanna handkerchief I ever want to see.

His actions amused me. The discrepancy between his personal habits and his particularity in the matter of his surroundings was exceedingly interesting. I have often noticed that such discrepancies seem to indicate exceptional characters. As I watched him his whole frame stiffened. The long gorilla arms contracted, the hairy head sunk forward in the tenseness of a serpent ready to strike. He uttered a shrill falsetto shriek that brought to a standstill every stevedore on the job, and sprang forward to seize his mate by the shoulder.

Evidently the grasp hurt. I can believe it might, from those huge hands. The man wrenched himself about with an oath of inquiry and pain. I could hear one side of what followed. The captain's high-pitched tones carried clearly; but the grumble and growl of the mate were indistinguishable at that distance.

"How far is it to the side of the ship, you hound of hell?" shrieked the captain.

Mumble—surprised—for an answer.

"Well, I'll tell you you swab! It's just two fathom from where you stand. Just two fathom! How long would it take you to walk there? How long? Just six seconds! There and back! You"— I won't bother with all the epithets, although by now I know Captain Selover's vocabulary fairly well. "And you couldn't take six seconds off to spit over the side! Couldn't walk two fathom! Had to spit on my quarter-deck, did you!"

Rumble from the mate.

"No, you won't call up any of the crew! You'll get a swab and get down on your knees, blame you! I'll teach you to be lazy."

The mate said something again.

"It don't matter if we ain't under way. That has nothing to do with it. The quarterdeck is clean, if the waist ain't, and nobody but a damn misbegotten son-of-a-lawyer would spit on deck, anyhow!" From this Captain Selover went on into a good old-fashioned deep-sea "cussing out," to the great joy of the stevedores.

The mate stood it pretty well, but there comes a time when further talk is useless even in regard to a most heinous offense. And, of course, as you know, the mate could hardly consider himself very seriously at fault. Why, the ship was not as yet at sea, and in all the clutter of charging. He began to answer back. In a moment it was a quarrel. Abruptly it was a fight. The mate marked Selover beneath the left eye. The captain, with beautiful simplicity, crushed his antagonist in his gorilla-like squeeze, carried him to the side of the vessel and dropped him, limp and beaten, to the pier. And the mate was a good, stout specimen of a seafarer, too.

Then the captain rushed below, emerging after an instant with a chest, which he flung after his subordinate. It was followed a moment later by a stream of small stuff—mingled with language—projected through an open port hole. This, in turn, ceased. The captain reappeared with a pail and brush, scrubbed feverishly at the offending spot, mopped it dry with that same old red bandana handkerchief, glared about him, and abruptly became serene and placid as a noon calm. He took up the direction of the stevedores. It was all most astounding.

Nobody paid any attention to the mate. He looked toward the ship once or twice, thought better of it, and began to pick up his effects, muttering savagely. In a moment or so he threw his chest aboard an outgoing truck and departed.

It was now nearly noon, and I was just in the way of going for something to eat, when I caught sight of another dray laden with boxes and crated affairs which I recognized as scientific apparatus. It was followed in quick succession by three others. Ignorant as I was of the requirements of a scientist, my common sense told me this could be no exploring outfit. I revised my first intention of going to the club, and bought a sandwich, or two at the corner coffee house. I don't know why, but even then the affair seemed big with mystery, with the portent of tragedy. Perhaps the smell of tar was in my nostrils and the sea called. It has always possessed for me an extraordinary allurement—

A little after 2 o'clock a cab drove to the after gangplank and stopped. From it alighted a young man of whom I shall later have occasion to tell you more, followed by Dr. Schermerhorn. The young man carried only a light leather "serviette," such as students use abroad; while the doctor fairly staggered under the weight of a square, brass-bound chest without handles. The singularity of this unequal division of labor struck me at once.

It struck also one of the dock men, who ran forward, eager for a tip.

"Kin I carry it box for you, boss?" he asked, at the same time reaching for it.

The doctor's thin figure seemed fairly to shrink at the idea.

"No, no!" he cried. "It is not for you to carry!"

He hastened up the gangplank, clutching the chest close. At the top Captain Selover met him.

"Hello, doctor," he squeaked. "Here in good time. We're busy, you see. Let me carry your chest for you."

"No, no!" Dr. Schimmerhorn fairly glared.

"It's almighty heavy," insisted the captain. "Let me give you a hand."

"You must not touch!" emphatically ordered the scientist. "Where is the cabin?"

He disappeared down the companionway clasping his precious load. The young man remained on deck to superintend the stowing of the scientific goods and the personal baggage.

All this time I had been thinking busily. I remembered distinctly one other instance when Dr. Schimmerhorn had disappeared. He came back inscrutably, but within a week his results on aerial photography were public property. I told myself that in the present instance his lavish use of money, the elaborate nature of his preparations, the evident secrecy of the expedition as evidenced by the fact that he had negotiated for the vessel only the day before setting sail, the importance of personal supervision as proved by the fact that he notoriously impractical in practical matters, and notoriously disliking anything to do with business—had conducted the affair himself instead of delegating it—why, gentlemen, don't you see that all this was more than enough to wake me up body and soul. Suddenly I came to a definite resolution. Captain Selover had descended to the pier. I approached him.

"You need a mate," said I.

He looked me over.

"Perhaps," he admitted. "Where's your man?"

"Right here," said I.

His eyes widened a little. Otherwise he showed no sign of surprise. I cursed my clothes.

Fortunately I had my master's certificate with me—I'd passed fresh

TO MEET MINEOWNERS

CONFERENCE HERE TODAY ON CARD SYSTEM.

Operators Have Agreed to Give Committee a Hearing.—No Probability of a Change.

A committee representing the citizens of Cripple Creek will arrive in Colorado Springs today to confer with the mine owners on the question of abolishing the card system used in the gold camp. This matter has been discussed at several meetings of citizens and mine operators and as a result the committee, consisting of seven members was appointed to meet the large mine operators of this city and see if some definite conclusion can not be arrived at. The mine owners have agreed to give the committee a hearing and the meeting will be held in the office of S. S. Bernard this afternoon. While the mine owners are perfectly willing to meet the committee and discuss the subject, they have in no way intimated that they are in favor of abolishing the card system. Their stand in this regard has been strengthened by the recent statements of the state labor commissioner, Alexander Swanson, to the effect that the abolishment of the system would result in further labor troubles in the camp. In view of the well-known attitude of the mine owners, it is not expected that the conference will achieve the ends aimed at by the business men and federation workers of the Cripple Creek district.

GIVES LAST SERMON

DR. WORK PREACHES IN FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Congregation Will Tender Reception to Pastor and Mrs. Work Tonight.—Leave Tomorrow.

The farewell sermon of the Rev. Dr. E. W. Work, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, was preached last night. The subject of the address was "The Bible and Civilization." The church was crowded to the doors and at the close of the services many of the audience crowded around the retiring pastor to bid him farewell, although a formal reception will be tendered Dr. and Mrs. Work in the church parlors this evening from 8 until 10 o'clock. They will leave here tomorrow morning, and after a two weeks' visit in West Virginia, Dr. Work will assume his duties as pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church of New York.

In his address last night Dr. Work showed how largely the Bible and its teachings have entered into the life of the world and determined its destiny to a large extent, socially, politically, morally and intellectually. It is the widest read of all books and there is not a corner of the earth where its influence has not been felt for good. Legislation and statecraft have been based on its teachings and to a great extent the literature of all Christian nations is permeated with incidents or lessons drawn therefrom. The relation of the Bible to personal life and its powerful influence in molding happy and useful lives were elaborated upon by the speaker in a broad and comprehensive manner.

At the close of the services yesterday morning the committee on resolutions, composed of Dr. J. R. Robinson, H. H. Seldomridge and E. E. Dunwoody, presented the following resolutions from the church regarding the approaching departure of Dr. Work. The resolutions were adopted by a rising vote of the congregation and a beautifully embossed copy was presented to the pastor. Following are the resolutions:

Whereas, Our pastor, Edgar W. Work, D. D., has been called to the Fourth Presbyterian church of New York city, and believes it his duty to accept the call and thus sever his pastoral relations with this church, and,

Whereas, The service Dr. Work has rendered since he assumed the pastorate of this church has been marked by the highest fidelity and efficiency, therefore,

Resolved, That we, the congregation of the First Presbyterian church, express to Dr. Work our love and esteem, and record some of his achievements, and personal attributes upon which these sentiments are based:

During the years and months he has been pastor of this church, there has been not only a large increase in membership, but increased activity in all departments of church work, new lines of activity initiated, a wider interest aroused in the study of the Bible, and in many souls, a quickening of their spiritual life.

From the pulpit the pure Gospel has been preached fearlessly, lovingly, attractively, and with spiritual power.

As a pastor, Dr. Work has been wise, tender, sympathetic, helpful, and willing to the limit of his physical strength.

In the public life of our city and state, he has been ever ready to uphold with tact and vigor, the highest ideals of social life and civil government; and the wider interests of missions and education, have found in him a devoted and intelligent advocate.

Resolved, That we express our deep sense of regret and sorrow, that with this day the active pastorate of Dr. Work over this church terminates, but link with this an expression of thankfulness that memory and love and good works endure eternal; and that we declare our earnest wishes, fortified by our prayers, that in his new field of labor, or wherever the high behest of duty may summon him, God may deal tenderly with him, his beloved wife and son, honor him with commissions to greater and greater service, and bless him with bounteous spiritual harvests.

Resolved further, That a copy of this preamble and resolutions be spread upon the records of the session of our church.

A SERIES OF RECITALS

College School of Music Will Give Concerts During Year.

Dean Hale, assisted by the faculty of the Colorado College School of Music, will begin a series of recitals of the principal works of the pianoforte, violin and song literature, about October 15. The first recital will include the first of the Beethoven sonatas, the first of the nocturnes and preludes of Chopin and other fitting works, grouped into an interesting program. The intention is to present the masterpieces in order, so far as possible.

The public is invited to attend these concerts, which, although designed primarily for the benefit of the school, are expected to prove interesting and profitable to all hearers. The opening concert last Thursday evening was an auspicious beginning of the recitals projected for this season.

THE FOUR GREAT EVILS

DR. CRAFTS DELIVERS FOUR ADDRESSES IN THIS CITY.

Noted Reform Leader Speaks in Y. M. C. A. and in Three of the Leading Churches.

The four great evils, intemperance, impurity, Sabbath breaking and gambling were discussed in four addresses delivered yesterday in this city by the Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent of the International Reform Bureau, with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Dr. Crafts spoke in the Y. M. C. A., the First Congregational, the First Methodist and the First Presbyterian churches. He [illegible] his audiences under the four heads mentioned and said that there are four great fields in which the evils may be fought, viz local, state, national and international. The four ways by which these evils may be attacked are by legislation, by letters, by lectures and by literature. The four forces united in the international crusade against the evils are the reform organization, the missionary societies, the chambers of commerce and the governments. The following four great principles for right living are laid down by Dr. Crafts as safe rules to follow:

Right relations among men, required by the second great commandment, do not spring spontaneously from right relations with God, but must be developed by education and organization.

As the individual is saved by the cross of Christ, the community must be saved by his crown, that is, by making the laws of Christ, little by little, the laws of business and politics and pleasure.

Environment affects conversion before and after, and the churches should therefore unite to create a favorable moral environment, especially for children and child races.

As all vices co-operate, and all virtues are related, Christian churches and citizens should promote all true reforms—not one alone.

Congress has enacted twelve important laws, relating to impurity, divorce, the Sabbath, and intoxicants, that were drawn by the Bureau, which also defeated a bad law to legalize race gambling in the District of Columbia, and another of like purpose in the Pennsylvania legislature. The Bureau's Pacific coast district secretary drew and carried to victory the new Sunday law of Idaho, which is working well. In all state legislatures good laws will be promoted by our secretaries, and bad laws defeated. Locally law enforcement will be aided wherever they go as lecturers. Much can be done by interviews of such experts with public officials. The Bureau's very extensive files of information are made widely useful by correspondence. Best of all, we can reach moral leaders in all lands with two ounces of stirring literature at a cost of 3 cents each, $30 per 1,000.

Our international specialty is to inform and arouse and express public sentiment in favor of a treaty of all civilized governments to prohibit the sale of intoxicants and opium to uncivilized and newly civilized races.

The emancipation of China having become assured by the action of the British and Chinese governments, to which the International Reform bureau materially contributed, the way is open to drive the white man's rum also from the mission fields, in the name of conscience and of commerce. To do this we need $50,000 for more speakers and literature, to enlist, first, the British people all over the world, and then continental nations, in the bureau's proposal, indorsed by the United States senate and President Roosevelt, and pending before the British government for its approval also, that all nations shall by treaty co-operation suppress the sale of intoxicants and opium smoking among all uncivilized races. There is no reason to expect this proposal will succeed without a world-wide agitation, nor is there any good reason to expect it will fail if supported adequately by international public sentiment, which undoubtedly exists, but must be aroused and expressed."

Dr. Crafts has traveled all over the world on lecturing tours and has delivered addresses in conventions, church services and public meetings in Canada, Great Britain, Australia, Japan, China and the Philippines, senate of Hawaii, banquet of commercial, political and education leaders, Tokio; China Missionary centennial, Shanghai; National Endeavor convention of Japan; breakfast reception antiopium societies, London.

Dr. Crafts has had extended audiences with the following high officials, in addition to those of the United States: Viceroy Yuan Shih Kai, Korea's resident general, Marquis Ito, Viscount Hyashi, foreign secretary, Japan, Secretaries of Weipupu, foreign office, China; H. E. M. Capelle, foreign secretary, Belgium; ambassadors of Great Britain, France, Spain, Sweden, Germany, Italy.

Secretary Root said to Dr. Crafts, when the latter was about to start on his recent foreign tour:

"I am with you and this government is with you on both propositions. As to opium in China, and liquor selling among the savage races. They are the disgraces of civilization. My part is diplomacy, your part is agitation."

Dr. Crafts is the author of 32 books, of which the best known are "Successful Men of Today," "The March of Christ Down the Centuries," "The Sabbath for Man," "Princeton Lectures on Practical Christian Sociology," "Intoxicants and Opium in All Times and Lands."

VALUATION IS DECREASED

Short Line Property Will Be Assessed at Reduced Figure.

The state board of equalization, which has been in session in Denver, hearing complaints and petitions of the various railroads and county assessors in Colorado, has announced a decrease of $15,450 in the valuation of the Colorado Springs & Cripple Creek District Railway company's property.

The total assessed valuation of corporate property in Colorado was fixed at $53,045,187, an increase of $1,674,933 over the valuation of 1906, and $173,589 more than the total corporate assessment announced last spring.

PROF. CARPENTER BACK

ADVISED BRITISH COLUMBIA ON IRRIGATION PROJECTS.

Fort Collins Expert Says Province Has Tremendous Possibilities in the Agricultural Line.

"British Columbia is going into the irrigation business on a large scale. A very large area between the Rockies and the Cascade ranges will develop into a splendid fruit-raising country within the next few years by the aid of irrigation," said Prof. L. G. Carpenter of the State Agricultural college at Fort Collins, who arrived in this city yesterday, after a month spent in British Columbia, where he was established by the government of that province to [illegible] irrigation.

Professor Carpenter was on hand on his return to this state by Fulton, M. P. P., minister of public works in the British Columbia cabinet, who spent a week gathering information on the Colorado irrigation law and observing at first hand the practical operation of irrigation methods in this state. The government of British Columbia contemplates large expenditures in the irrigation line and has recognized Colorado as the most advanced state of the Union in this regard. When it came to a question of securing information the government appealed to Professor Carpenter, who is recognized as one of the greatest irrigation experts in the United States.

New Irrigation Law.

Mr. Fulton left for his home in Victoria last night, highly impressed with the scientific manner in which irrigation is carried on in this state and determined to urge the British Columbia government to copy largely after this state in framing its proposed new irrigation laws. Mr. Fulton and Professor Carpenter were appointed an irrigation commission for this purpose with full powers to investigate conditions in the province and summon witnesses if necessary. The new law will be based on their report. The idea is to frame a law incorporating all the good features of the Colorado law and rejecting any inapplicable to conditions in British Columbia.

Adapted to Fruit Raising.

"I spent more than a month in the province," said Mr. Carpenter, "and visited a large part of the territory that is deemed suitable for irrigation. The land between the Cascade and the Rockies receives very little rainfall, but the climate is admirably adapted to fruit raising, and, with a system of good ditches, the land will be worth from $150 to $250 an acre. They can raise all kinds of fruit, including peaches and grapes. The climate is a little warmer and the summer season longer than here and the winters are not so cold. Owing to the formation of the country the large irrigation schemes such as we have in Colorado will not be necessary, but there is room for a multitude of smaller projects and with the completion of these the country is bound to develop rapidly. The province owns all the government land, and, instead of the homestead system, has what they call the preemption system by which a settler takes the land and pays $1 an acre within a certain time limit. The government feels that there are immense possibilities in the development of this territory and I think there is no question about it."

Much Feeling Against Japs.

While in Victoria and Vancouver, Professor Carpenter had an opportunity to observe the conditions in regard to the anti-Japanese feeling and observed that, as in the Pacific coast cities of the United States, the feeling against orientals is confined largely to the Japs. The Chinese are very well thought of by all classes. The Japs are regarded as tricky and unreliable. They also aspire to higher positions and enter more varied occupations than do the Chinese.

WILL LECTURE THURSDAY

Y. M. C. A. Star Course Opens This Week—Wendling First.

The first of the lectures in the star course of the Y. M. C. A. for this season will be delivered Thursday night in the Opera house by George R. Wendling of Washington, D. C., one of the foremost of the public lecturers in the United States. Mr. Wendling is an orator of unusual power and eloquence and has attracted large audiences in all the large cities of the country. He is specially strong in the lectures entitled "The Man of Galilee," "Unseen Realities" and "Saul of Tarsus," and it will be on one of these subjects that he will speak in this city. The lecture course of the association last season proved highly instructive and popular and the course this year is equally high class. Mr. Wendling is one of the best speakers on the star program for the season and should draw as large an audience as any speaker who ever appeared in Colorado Springs.

KING EDWARD AS A SAILOR.

The British Ruler Is Almost as Fond of a Ship as He Is of a Fine Horse.

Fritz Norris in Recreation.

King Edward has always been devoted to the sea. If there is one thing more than another, after a horse, which excites the interest of a Briton it is a ship and the king has always shown himself a typical Englishman in his love of the sea. He paid the navy the compliment of entrusting it with the education of his two sons, while he himself is a no less enthusiastic than practical sailor, as well as of the ironclad as of the yachting type. It so happened that the year 1877, which beheld the first appearance of the then Prince of Wales' colors at Newmarket, also witnessed his first signal victory as a yachtsman; for in that year, with his schooner Hildegarde, he won the coveted Queen's cup at Cowes—open to members of the Royal Yacht squadron, of which His Royal Highness was, and continued to remain, commodore until his succession to the crown. Once more, in 1880, the king secured the holy grail of the sea with his cutter Formosa, while in 1895 and 1897 he again carried it off with his famous craft Britannia, which generally enabled him to rule the waves wherever he flew his burgee from Cannes to the Clyde. No one in all England has done more than he to encourage recovery of the America's cup, and it may be remembered how his majesty's devotion to this great national cause, as represented by the Shamrock II, came very near to costing his life.

The king has, however, of late years, rather favored his splendid steamer the Victoria and Albert, and a new steam yacht is now being built. The Victoria and Albert is a stately looking vessel, resplendent in handsomely gilded carved work at bows and stern, whilst two lines of gilded rope molding sweep gracefully along her sides. For the interior decoration white and gold lously are used. The prettiest effect of this can be seen in the deck saloon, which is a very fine apartment and used for dining or reception purposes.

LANGUAGE OF THE SOIL.

From the New York Sun.

Sambo Harris, the eminent colored oracle of Shakerag, Ga., always called watermelons "watermilyons." Sambo died thirteen years ago at the ripe age of 111, as nearly as he could tell. He liked to have the papers read to him, being very intelligent, though illiterate. One day Thweatt dropped into the cabin of the old man after a tiresome hunt for some Georgia sandquail (creatures half the size of soras), and having the latest paper in his pocket, proceeded to read about "Wall Street and its watered millions." The old darky straightened up from his shuck mattress and exclaimed: "Fo Gawd! Mrs. Aleck, Ah knowed it wuz comin'. Ef dis great state o' Georgia, suh, hed stuck to watermilyons 'stead o' cotton dis land would be flowin' wid nuthin' but milk and honey."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S TOPIC

A HERO'S PROMOTION.

By William T. Ellis.

Every present has a past. What lies behind is often more interesting than what is to the fore. Kipling's commonplace travel letters are extremely worth while as revealing the original sources of much of his best later works. There the reader finds many of the real persons, places and incidents which later were wrought into fiction and poetry. This is the charm of biography: it introduces one to the factors that went into the making of a life. Now that a new figure looms largest on the horizon of Israel's history, as the Sunday schools are studying it, it is worth while to look behind the promotion, and see Joshua in the making.

A hard boyhood, that school in which so many great men have been trained, educated Joshua to life's actualities. He had known the rigors of slavery in Egypt, and all the blackness of that pit out of which Moses led the nation. Then, better than a college course, Joshua had been servant and associate of Moses. He had seen more than a little fighting; it was under his leadership that Amalek was smitten, while Moses prayed, Aaron and Hur holding up his hand. Always Joshua appears as a man of action, with the virtues of the doer and the warrior. Most commonly, though, he is remembered as one of the two spies who brought back a favorable report from the Promised Land. His fear-bitten comrades had perished miserably in the wilderness; here, at last, he was vindicating his earlier judgment by himself leading the host into the long-desired Canaan.

A Man Who Was "Somebody."

Every appearance of Joshua in history suggests personality. He was a character. In a colorless crowd he stood out like a red flag on a green field. The Bible honors personality; today it is seemingly discredited by society. Civilization seems to be determined to wipe out distinctive lines; to dress us all alike, house us all alike, make us walk and talk alike, and in all things to compel us to conform to its dead-level standards. The greatest harm done by the changing styles is that they tend to make men and women as much alike as wooden figures from a toy Noah's ark.

There is no vital need that one should be in the fashion; there is greatest need that one should be one's self. It is everybody's business in the world to express his own individuality, to live his own life, to make his own definite contribution to his time; in a word, to be a personality. From the thin ranks of the personalities God has to select all his leaders of men, even as he chose Joshua from the characterless crowd of wanderers. The pursuits who abet the modern process of repressing and effacing the individuality of children, endeavoring to have all conform to a conventional model, just as a Chinese workman carves a thousand ivory figures exactly alike, are doing everything in their power to prevent their offspring from ever becoming Joshuas. Instead of a socialism which would level everybody down to the one plane, the world needs a noble and unselfish individualism which will lift up each person to the fullest possible expression of himself.

"The King Is Dead."

Persons who are in the habit of keeping an eye on current events, and of putting two and two together, see a remarkable shifting of present-day leadership. Many old leaders are dying. Others are being repudiated. A new force of men stand at the forefront today. All things considered, the change has been decidedly for the better.

"Faces front!" is the divine command. "Long live the king!" must follow hard on the heels of "The king is dead." The world's business must go on; the living present is more important than the dead past. There is no time to spend in vain regrets over Moses; for the commands of Joshua must be obeyed. The attempt to keep a dead leader to the fore is foolish and futile; even China is finding that she must shake off the dead hand.

To say that all the great are dead, and that the former days were better, is to say that God has failed in his task with humanity. Joshua was a better leader for this new period of Israel's life than Moses could have been. The present day's work and women can do it best. Remember Moses only as an inspiration; follow Joshua. He who fails in today's duty is recreant to the past. All who let present opportunity escape, while they mourn at the grave of the dear dead, are showing poorest honor to their departed.

"Heirs of the Ages."

As mountain ozone fills the lungs, summoning every cell and tissue to do its best, so a broad and exalted conception of life and its relations expands and quickens one's powers. To see the present as but part of a whole, of which the past and the future are also pieces, is to attain a position where symmetrical growth and effective service are most possible. Today is "heir of all the ages." Joshua succeeds Moses, his arm strengthened by all of the power of Moses and his work advanced by all of the latter's achievements. There is scant room for vanity in the life which recalls that it stands on the shoulders of all who have gone before. Each of us is himself—plus all predecessors. We live in houses that other men have built and do a work which other men began. So let us be humble.

"What matter, I or they?
Mine or another's day?
So the right word be said,
And life the sweeter made.

"Ring, bells in far-off steeples,
The joy of unborn peoples!
Sound, trumpets far-off blown,
Your triumph is my own!"

Great experiences are chastening. In the hour of his accession to leadership Joshua doubtless perceived his own limitations most clearly. Else there would not have been need for God to hearten him repeatedly. Whoever undertakes a big job, or gets a large conception of life, is bound to feel chastened and inadequate.

The Great Partnership.

A journalist stands unabashed before kings because he represents a nation. A traveling salesman has confidence to approach a busy man because he represents an important firm himself. The preacher, elsewhere, perhaps, a very ordinary man, in the pulpit lifts up his voice in assured teaching to all men because he believes himself to be the messenger of the Highest.

The reason why Joshua was confident was that he had the assurance, "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee; I will not fail thee nor forsake thee." This sense of partnership with God is what makes the weakest strong. It is confidence and power. For in this firm the Senior Partner pledges his all to stand behind the acts of his associates.

A divine audacity is imparted to a character by the knowledge that it is actively co-operating with God. This explains the sublime daring of the great reformers. It makes plain why the missionary propaganda throughout the world is irresistible. Better than to have an armed host at one's back is it to have the assurance, "Lo, I am with you all the days." Paul is the hero of the apostolic church because he had learned to say, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

One other enabling was given to Joshua. He was to have the presence of Jehovah and also the revealed will of Jehovah. A good soldier must know his "general orders." So Joshua was instructed, "This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth, but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein; for then shalt thou make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success." Amid the day's maxims on "success" this deserves a first place as being of overmastering importance. Walk God's way and work God's way, and failure is impossible.

The Badge of Leadership.

The keynote of this lesson is found in the thrice-repeated exhortation to Joshua: "Be thou strong and very courageous." It seems as if Jehovah were dinning into the new leader's ears the supreme importance of courage. The Son of Hun was no coward, yet even he needed to be told, with earnest iteration, that in the fighting man, in the administrator and in the leader, courage comes next in importance to obedience. Even God cannot do much with a weak and fearful man.

A good life rule is, when undecided, do the more courageous thing. There is never a day, and scarcely an hour, in even the quietest life when the exercise of courage is not called for. The amelioration of society's ills waits more upon strength than upon sweetness. Before we deal tenderly with the prostrate let us deal bravely with the men whose heels are upon their necks. Before we give charity let us be courageous enough to give justice. Before we abandon ourselves to prayer over outward civic conditions, let us betake ourselves to work—not forgetting to pray the while. In all conditions, let us exercise courage, and, lo, we shall find all other virtues thriving the more. The Canaans of the heart are conquered by fearlessness.

DOING THE WORK

Terse Comments on the Uniform Prayer Meeting Topic of the Young People's Societies—Christian Endeavor, Baptist Young People's Union, Epworth League, etc.—for October 6, is, "Rally to the Work!" Exod. 14:15; II. Chron. 31:20, 21. (Consecration Meeting.)

By William T. Ellis.

"On the job" is one of the newer slang phrases. The colloquial way to praise an efficient man is to say that he is "on the job." He is not merely "occupying a position" or "filling an office," he is actually doing the work. That is the day's demand—

"Men who do the work for which they draw the wage."

As the cry for efficiency echoes throughout the commercial world, so is it also heard in religious service. Religious effectiveness is not coextensive with religious organization. Too much of the church's power is spent in making the wheels go round. Now output is the only possible justification for a machine—yes, and of human beings as well. They must produce—"deliver the goods," to borrow again a forceful phrase from the day's slang. The only test of a tree is its fruit; the only proof of a successful religious organization is its results.

Work is an end in itself, yet it effects a still higher end in the character of the worker.

Men usefulest in the world are simply used.—Mrs. Browning.

I would be simply used,
Spending myself in humble task or great,
Priest at the altar, keeper of the gate,
So be my Lord requesteth just that thing
Which at the needful moment I may bring.
Oh, joy of serviceableness divine,
Of merging will and work, dear Lord, in thine,
Of knowing that results, however small,
Flow into the stream of purpose fall
I would be simply used!
—James Buckham.

Diligence is more than half of skill. Sheer industry can accomplish more than genius. There is less call for the brilliant worker than for the one who simply keeps plugging away at his task through all conditions. They who wait most for inclination to work, find inclination increasingly coy. In Christian service especially it is the faithful plodder who counts most.

Failures are not meant to be final. They are simply experiments; they point to a better way of achieving the desired end. Probably nobody ever accomplished anything for mankind without first having had a dismal experience with what he thought at the time to be failures. Out of such, though, comes success.

Nobody works well before a looking-glass. Self-consciousness is a foe to efficiency.

They greatly win who greatly dare. It is better to realize vast expectations occasionally than to realize small expectations constantly. Bigger planning means better working. The person who attempts great things for God are the ones whom he uses to bring great things to pass. This insatiable spirit of desire for larger service is more productive of results than native ability. The mediocre man of enterprise brings more things to pass than the talented sluggard.

It does not matter how small you start, but it does matter how small you grow. Rather than lift a 300 pound weight the first day, and then have to come down to 200 the next, it is better to begin by uplifting one potato the first day, and two the next, and three the next, and so on.—J. H. Denison.

The multiplication of small deeds may become a great work, as small bricks make a great building.

Two engines of equal steam-power may accomplish far different results, because one of them leaks steam, wastes a great deal blowing its whistle, and has rusty ill-adjusted bearings, while the other is tight and bright, and throws all the steam into the steam-chest and makes the most of it. Where have we wasted power? Where have the bearings been rough? Where can we concentrate by closing the leaks this year?—The C. E. World.

Purpose produces power. Determination begets deeds. "A mind to work" rebuilt Jerusalem. A spirit of resolution will accomplish wonders in the body of workers. If this spirit, "Rally to the Work," can be infused into a young people's society, its winter's success is sure. For ways of working wait only on a will to work. There is plenty to do, and means of doing it, for every willing worker.

No Christian work is large enough which does not take thought of the whole world's needs.

Better work makes better workers.

NEWS AND NOTES.

A New York newspaper man, Louis Froelick, a Princeton alumnus, has gone to Pekin to work in the new Y. M. C. A. there.

"The "Black Pope," as the general of the Jesuit order, Father Wentz, is called, is expected soon to visit the houses of his order in America.

A correspondence course in applied Christianity has been prepared by Charles Stelze, secretary of the department of church and labor of the Presbyterian denomination.

The Orthodox Russian church of North America is now presided over by Archbishop Platon, who has recently come to this country, accompanied by a number of clergy.

The British parliament has lately passed a law permitting a man to marry his deceased wife's sister. The new law provides, however, that a man may not marry the widow of his deceased brother. Many of the high church clergy, including the bishop of London, insist that the old regulation of the prayer-book shall be enforced, in spite of the law, so far as it is within their power to do so.

Three bodies of English Methodists, the Methodist New Connexion, the United Methodist Free Churches and the Bible Christian Methodist church, were formally merged last month. The combined membership will be 190,000. A thanksgiving fund of $500,000 for the new church's work was inaugurated. The English Wesleyan, the largest of the Methodist bodies in Great Britain, does not go into the union.

A concerted movement has been inaugurated in Chicago by the four young men's unions of the Presbyterian, Congregational, Methodist and Baptist churches and the adult Bible classes of the Cook County Sunday-school union, for a great evangelistic campaign to be conducted in Chicago next year by "Gipsy" Smith, R. A. Torrey and J. Wilbur Chapman. Preparatory to this a two month's evangelistic campaign opens the first week in October, with Dr. Torrey in charge.

A startling effect of the over-churching of small New England towns is pointed out by Edward Tallmadge Root in Zion's Herald. He finds that in towns of an average population of 441 persons, having but one church, the average church membership is 71, whereas in towns with an average population of 710 persons, and two churches, the average membership is only 64. In three-church towns (population, 754) the average church membership is 52, and in four-church towns (population, 886) the average church membership falls to 43.

SEVEN SENTENCE SERMONS.

It is a good thing that life should gain in sweetness, but only provided that it does not lose in strength.—Roosevelt.

Not what does a man believe, but what is his attitude toward the spirit of Truth? is the all-important question.—Dr. A. H. Bradford.

Many a crime deemed innocent on earth is registered in heaven.—Cowper.

When the hour of death comes—that comes to high and low alike—then it's na what we hae dune for ourselves, but what we hae dune for others, that we think on maist pleasantly.—Sir Walter Scott.

Praise is well, compliment is well, but affection is the final and most precious reward that any man can win, whether by character or achievement.—Mark Twain.

One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break,
Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph,
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.—Robert Browning.

Let us see that whenever we have failed to be loving, we have also failed to be wise; that whenever we have been blind to our neighbors' interests, we have also been blind to our own; whenever we have hurt others, we have hurt ourselves much more.—Charles Kingsley.

water on the great lakes—I always carry that sort of document on the chance that it may come handy. I chanced to have a couple of naval indorsements, results of the late war.

"Look here," I said before I gave it to him. "You don't believe in me. My clothes are too good. That's all right. They're all I have that are good. I'm broke. I came down here wondering whether I'd better throw myself in the drink."

"You look like a dude," he squeaked. "Where did you ever ship?"

I handed him my certificate. The indorsements from Admiral Keays and Capt. Arnold impressed him. He stared at me again and a gleam of cunning crept into his eyes.

"Nothing crooked about this?" he breathed softly.

I had the key to this side of his character. You remember I had overheard the night before his statement of his moral scruples. I said nothing, but looked knowing.

"What was it?" he murmured. "Plain desertion or something worse?"

I remained inscrutable.

"Well," he conceded, "I do need a mate; and a naval man—even if he is wantin' to get out of sight—"

"He won't spit on your decks, anyway," I broke in boldly.

Capt. Selover's hairy face bristled about the mouth. This I subsequently discovered was symptom of a grin.

"You say that, eh?" he trebled.

"Aren't you afraid he'll bring down the police and delay your sailing?" I asked.

He grinned again, with a cunning twinkle in his eye.

"You needn't worry. There ain't goin' to be any police. He had his advance money, and he won't risk it by tryin' to come back."

We came to an agreement. I professed surprise at the wages. The captain guardedly explained that the expedition was secret.

"What's our port?" I asked, to test him.

"Our papers are made out for Honolulu," he replied.

We adjourned to sign articles.

"By the way," said I, "I wish you wouldn't make them out in my own name. 'Eagen' will do."

"All right," he laughed. "I sabe. Eagen it is."

"I'll be aboard at six," said I. "I've got to make some arrangements."

"Wish you could help with the lading," said he. "Still, I can get along. Want any advance money?"

"No," I replied; then I remembered that I was supposed to be broke. "Yes," I amended.

He gave me ten dollars.

"I guess you'll show up," he said. "Wouldn't do this to everybody. But a naval man—even if he is dodgin' Uncle Sam——"

"I'll be here," I assured him.

At that time I wore a pointed beard. This I shaved. Also I was accustomed to use eyeglasses. The trouble was merely a slight astigmatism which bothered me only in reading or close inspection, so I discarded them. I had my hair cut rather close. When I had put on sea boots, blue trousers and shirt, a pea jacket and a cap, I felt quite safe from the recognition of a man like Dr. Schermerhorn. In fact, as you shall see, I hardly spoke to him during all the voyage out.

Promptly at six, then, I returned with a sea chest, bound I knew not whither, to be gone I knew not for how long, and pledged to act as second officer on a little hundred-and-fifty-ton schooner.

COMMANDED THE CHALLENGER.

Admiral Maclear, of the British navy, who died suddenly at Niagara Falls on Wednesday, commanded the Challenger during her celebrated scientific voyage which lasted from 1872 to 1876, covered 60,000 miles and resulted in many valuable additions to the world's knowledge.

COAL MINING ACCIDENTS IN THE UNITED STATES

Any statement giving the number and character of the coal mining accidents in the United States must necessarily be somewhat incomplete. The United States geological survey, in collecting the statistics of coal production, does not directly obtain information in regard to accidents, but through the courtesy of state and territorial mine inspectors and other officials data concerning accidents have been furnished for publication by the survey.

On account of the prominence given by the press to mine explosions the opinion is generally held that the danger from explosion is greater than any other to which the miner is liable, and that most of the lives lost in mines are lost in this way. Statistics do not bear out this impression. The danger from gas or dust explosions is serious, but it appears that the number of deaths from this cause in 1906 was only 15 per cent of the total. More than three times as many deaths were due to falls of roof and coal, but accidents of this kind kill only a few at a time, and accounts of them are seldom carried far from the mines. Nearly one-half (991 out of 2061) of the fatal accidents reported from twenty states were due to falls of roof or coal, 328 were due to gas and dust explosions, and 720 to other causes.

Maryland reports the lowest death rate (1.09 per thousand), Michigan being second, with 1.51, and Missouri third, with 1.63. Colorado reports the highest (7.74) and West Virginia the next highest (5.65).

Detailed statistics concerning accidents in coal mines in the United States are given in an advance chapter from "Mineral Resources of the United States, Calendar Year 1906," on the production of coal in 1906, by E. W. Parker, which will soon be ready for distribution.

SEEN FROM A BALLOON.

A new aspect of ballooning is referred to by Peter Rossegger. He says that up about 4,000 feet the beauty of the earth's landscape disappears. The earth seems simply a dark, dirty surface. The outlines of the mountains are lost, and trees, houses, towns, all look like toys. The beauties of illumination disappear; there is nothing near, nothing far; distance vanishes. Only the ugly things that remain visible, the yellow fields, the roofs of houses, the white streets. The landscape is gone. The waters are dark and lack individuality; the silence of death is upon everything. Looking up, it was the same. The balloon was above the clouds; there was nothing to see but space, sheer, hollow space, without relief. "The Lord preserve us from such a way of traveling," concludes Peter Rosseger; "it would be a new age-wrinkle in the countenance of mankind."

LUSITANIA ANCHORAGE

For the moorings of the gigantic Lusitania in the Mersey, where the tidal currents run at six or seven knots, a huge pear-shaped buoy has been anchored between Tranmere and Rock Ferry, on the Cheshire side of the river. The buoy is held by four enormous chain cables, made of links with metal three and three-quarter inches in diameter, having an aggregate weight of about 200 tons. The four anchors between them weigh 36 tons. The cables have twice the strength of those used for mooring the largest warship of the British navy, the Dreadnought.

DANCING SCHOOL tonight at Majestic hall. All those holding tickets are requested to be present and take their lessons, as the school will close November 1.

DEATH—Charles Bradley Wood, aged 64 years, died at his home, 222 East Jefferson street, at 7:15 o'clock yesterday morning. Funeral services will be held from the residence at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

CHRISTENING—The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eaton, 416 East Yampa street, was christened by the Rev. A. N. Taft, pastor of St. Stephen's church, in the church, at special service yesterday afternoon. The boy was named Albert Edward. Mr. and Mrs. William D. Shellenberger acted as godfather and godmother.

TO DISSOLVE RELATIONS—The Pueblo presbytery will meet in the First Presbyterian church in this city at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon to formally dissolve the pastoral relations between Dr. E. W. Work and the church. A pastoral committee of eight members, all of whom have not been appointed, will later recommend a successor to Dr. Work.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES — The executive committee of the Associated Charities will meet at the offices of the society, 213 Hagerman building, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. This is the last meeting of the fiscal year, and many matters of importance will be discussed. The preliminary reports of the year's work will be submitted.

CUBAN SEMINARY.

There is to be a Protestant Episcopal theological seminary in Cuba for the preparation of Cubans for the ministry, for quiet though the church advance has been, there are 35 stations in that missionary district, three congregations in Havana, one of them English-speaking, and Bishop Albion W. Knight has confirmed a class of 14, more than half males, and the majority Spaniards, not Cubans. The bishop holds this to indicate that the church is getting out of the phase of "preaching services" alone. He has appointed as warden of the seminary Rev. A. T. Sharpe, and three professors, Archdeacon Steele, of Havana; Rev. C. B. Colmore, a Tennesseean who went to Cuba with the bishop in 1904, and Rev. Esteban Morrell, a priest of great learning and eloquence. It is Bishop Knight's aim to have the seminary train Episcopal ministers for all Spanish-American countries. For some years the Episcopal church has had a seminary for Portuguese Americans in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, where Rev. Dr. L. L. Kinsolving is bishop.

Pure food laws are good. Burnett's Vanilla is pure. Insist upon Burnett's.

LOOK AT SLEEPING PRINCE.

The little Crown Prince of Spain, in pursuance of an ancient custom, holds a reception during his morning nap nearly every day. The ministers in attendance and other high officials assemble in the palace at a fixed hour and are admitted in a body to the nursery to gaze upon the sleeping infant.
